Abstract

Quite possibly the first material to traverse the first supply chain was food and beverage, and no industry has proven more core to our existence since. As such, the grocery business continues to set the distribution watermark in terms of practices, operations, technology and information flow. This interactive panel discussion will feature three accomplished leaders who have each upset the shopping cart in their companies to grow, compete, consolidate and better serve their customers. They will each share their best moves and their vision of the future in the science of warehousing and distribution. This meeting will be nutritious food for thought for anyone delivering goods to customers.
